A BRIEF SKETCH

OF THE

ORIGIN AND PRESENT STATE OF

THE CITY OF PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA is the capital of Pennsylvania, and the chief city of the United States, in point of size and splendour; though it now fills but the second rank in respect to commercial importance: the trade of America having latterly flowed more freely into the open channels of the bay of New York. It must also yield metropolitan precedence to the doubtful policy of a Seat of Government far removed from the centre of wealth and population, the pendulum of national activity, which must long vibrate (perhaps for ever) between Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York; a chain of commercial cities, whose vigorous impulse is already accelerated by the bold ramification of turnpikes and canals:

Philadelphia is situated about 40 degrees north of the equator, and 75 west of London; being in the same parallel of latitude with Spain, Italy, and Greece; climates whose happy temperature had already indicated for Pennsylvania a milder winter, before the original frosts of November and December, by which the first adventurers were sometimes frozen up in the Delaware, had evidently yielded to the qualifying effects of exposing the surface of the earth to the rays of the sun.

Its founder, the benevolent and pacific William Penn, denominated it PHILADELPHIA, or the city of BROTHERLY LOVE, from a town in ancient Greece, so named in honour of the fraternal attachment of Attalus and Eumenes; and afterwards famous in the Christian world, for one of the Seven Churches to which St. John addressed his prophetic visions—A name methinks of auspicious omen: “Behold, (says the inspired Apostle to the Angel of the church in Philadelphia) I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it.” Religious liberty is here a chartered right, the policy, as well as the equity of which, to say nothing of its consistency with the spirit of that religion which breathes peace on earth, and good will to men, is happily confirmed in these latter ages of the church, by the harmony and fellowship in which the various Professors of the modern Philadelphia so peculiarly fraternize.

PENN had been concerned in the settlement of New-Jersey, some years before he obtained from Charles II, a grant of the territory on the western side of the Delaware. The Dutch and Swedes were then numerous at Upland (now Chester), at Newcastle, and at the Hørkils (now Lewis-Town), and a number of his brethren in religious profession, had already established themselves at Shackamaxon (now Kensington, a suburb of Philadelphia) in the year 1678; when a ship, called the Shield of Stockton, the first that had ever ventured to sail so high up the river, in tacking about, ran her bowsprit among the trees which lined the shore where the city now stands; and the New Comers on board, bound for Burlington, then remarked to each other, that it would be a fine place for a town.

The royal grant passed the great seal on the 4th of March, 1681; and in August the following year, the venerable Legislator of Pennsylvania set sail from London in the ship Welcome, captain Greenway.

The proprietor was accompanied by a hundred of his friends and fellow professors, contemptuously called Quakers, by their haughty countrymen, because, in their religious meetings, like the Faithful of every age, they sometimes trembled at the word of God.

A prosperous gale wafted the Patriarchs of Pennsylvania, in six weeks, to the friendly coast of America; and the Proprietary landed at Newcastle, on the 24th of

OF PHILADELPHIA.

October, under the acclamations of the Dutch settlers, who accompanied him to Upland, the principal Swedish settlement, where he collected an assembly of all the freemen of the province, by whom his jurisdiction was unanimously recognised and confirmed.

It was here that the Father of his country made a treaty with the harmless Natives, which was to last, in the figurative style of those nervous Aborigines, who have since been so grossly misrepresented by European theorists, as long as the trees should grow, or the waters run.—A treaty that was faithfully observed by both parties (let the potentates of Europe blush) through a happy period of 80 successive years; and that has since been consigned to historic immortality by the patriotic pencil of a descendant of one of the peaceful assistants, now the first painter of the age.*

The founder of Pennsylvania was not long in fixing upon a situation that seemed prepared by nature, perhaps by Providence, for the sudden growth of his future capital. The spot was then covered with timber, its foundation was a stratum of potter's clay, the harbour furnished a bed of sand, the nearest hills contained quarries of stone, the vicinity yielded limestone and marble, and the penetration of intelligent observers, discovered mines of coal and iron, upon the navigable branches of the Delaware, long before the new settlement afforded hands to work them.

It is an extensive plain, five miles above the confluence of two navigable rivers, the Delaware and the Schuylkill; the former though 120 miles from the sea, being there a mile in breadth, and deep enough for vessels of 1200 tons; the latter half as wide as the Thames at London, being also navigable as high as the scite of the town.

Some families of Swedes and Fins had obtained by settlement, the right of possession. They willingly sold or exchanged their claim; and by the end of the year

A BRIEF SKETCH

1682, the ground plot of the future city was regularly laid out. Nine streets two miles in length, run east and west, from river to river, and twenty-three of a mile, intersect them at right angles, from north to south. None of these are less than fifty feet wide, and they distribute the plan into squares, the interior of which was designed for yards and gardens. Two main streets of a hundred feet wide, cross each other in the centre, and form a public square, of which four more were laid out in the different quarters of the city; and a range of houses for the principal inhabitants was intended to open upon the water, in the same manner of the celebrated Bomb Quay at Rotterdam; for which purpose the warehouses, &c. along the river, were intended to have been kept from rising above the bank. But cupidity (perhaps convenience) has crowded the platforms between the streets with narrow alleys; the public squares, except that only in the centre, have been otherwise appropriated, and the bank of the river has been built up with a row of houses that now intercept, from the city, the intended view of the port.

Four score houses and cottages were erected within the year, one of which has lately been occupied as a tavern, the sign of the Boatswain and Call, at the corner of Front and Dock streets, and another that was the city residence of William Penn, is yet standing in Black-horse alley, directly back of Latitia court, which was so named from one of the daughters of the Proprietary. Opposite to the latter, in the middle of Market street, there stood for many years a monument of primitive simplicity, a wooden jail that was seldom inhabited by any body but the jailor.

The first child born in the new city, by name John Key, lived to his 85th year; one Edward Drinker, who was born in a cave under the bank of Delaware, survived till the Declaration of Independence, when the capital of the United States, was estimated to contain six thousand houses, and forty thousand people; and there is a widow lady yet living, whose mother arrived from England when there were but three houses in Philadelphia.

The State house or Town hall, a substantial edifice of 200 feet front including the wings, was erected within half a century after the woods were cleared away from its scite; the first Episcopal church was soon afterward ornamented with a steeple that may vie in point of elegance, with any spire in Europe; and, while Pennsylvania was still a dependent colony, scarcely distinguished on the other side of the Atlantic among twelve adjacent provinces of the British empire in America, a new prison was erected, sufficiently capacious for the future introduction of the philanthropic reform that has since converted our jails into manufactories, and our criminals into manufacturers.

During the revolutionary war, the capital of the struggling colonies remained stationary, or rather retrograded, under the occupation of the Royal army, by whom however, the houses were first numbered, and a floating bridge was thrown across the Schuylkill.

The western improvements then scarcely extended half a mile from the Delaware, and it was a country walk for the citizens to go to the Hospital, the Swedes church, or the ship-yards at Kensington.

Since the revolution, so happily terminated by the Independence of the United States, under the disinterested co-operation of a Franklin, in counsel, a Morris, in finance, and a Washington, in the field, Philadelphia has increased with astonishing rapidity, notwithstanding the ravages of a mortal fever, introduced from the pestilential atmosphere of the western Archipelago, where it has been excited to unusual virulence by the civil wars of St. Domingo.

A superb edifice of the Corinthian order, with a majestic portico of six fluted columns of white marble, was then building for the reception of the Bank of the United States, a vigorous offspring of the Federal Constitution, that had been framed in 1788, and was organized in the following year, by the patriotic Washington, on being voluntarily ratified by two-thirds of the Thirteen Independent States, which then formed the American Union. Thus exhibiting to the expecting world, a first example of a great Nation reforming a defective system of government, without unsheathing the sword.

The City has since been beautified with an elegant structure, executed in white marble, from the design of an Ionick Temple, for the offices of the Bank of Pennsylvania; and the intersection of the two principal streets is now occupied by a round Tower, for the reception and distribution of the Schuylkill water, raised by machinery to a level of thirty or forty feet above the highest ground in the city.

The streets of Philadelphia are paved with pebble stones, and bordered with ample footways, raised one foot above the carriage way, for the ease and safety of passengers. They are kept cleaner than those of any city in Europe, excepting the towns of Holland, where trade is carried on by canals; and London is the only capital in the world that is better lighted at night. Many of the new streets have been latterly planted with poplars, whose rapid growth, and spiral form, peculiarly adapt them to shade the avenues of a city. Their introduction has already given to some sections the air of Public Walks, for the ornament of which nothing is wanting but Fountains and Statuary: particularly in some parts of Arch, Market and Chesnut streets; but especially in Walnut street from sixth to eighth, in front of Sansom Row; where a handsome walk 33 feet wide exclusive of the width of the street, is beautifully laid out with four rows of Lombardies, interspersed with drooping willows, forming the finest public promenade within the built parts of the City.

The private buildings are generally three stories high: They are built of a clear red brick, and ornamented in the new streets with facings, key stones, and flights of steps, in white marble.

Ever since the operation of the Federal Constitution, four or five hundred houses have been annually erected, no small proportion of which (it is said, not less than two hundred) have been built, or caused to be built, by a single Citizen,* whose well laid plans have greatly improved the Town, particularly in Walnut street; in Sansom street, the first that has been built in America with strict attention to uniformity; and in Second street, where it crossed a morass that had long formed an inconvenient separation between the City and the Northern Suburbs.

Philadelphia, including Southwark and the Northern Liberties, now extends near three miles along the Delaware, and about a mile east and west; and is supposed to contain thirteen thousand houses and eighty thousand people.

There are in it upwards of thirty churches or meeting houses, in which the various denominations of Believers perform the homage of public worship, to the common Father of Mankind, according to their peculiar forms and persuasions, under the happy system of toleration, secured to all professions, without a legal establishment for any.

Three large Meeting houses have lately been added to different parts of the City, and stone piers have been erected in the river Schuylkill, over which is thereon a beautiful structure of wood, forming a Bridge of three arches, whose gigantic span would have been thought impracticable in Europe, long after the first settlement of Pennsylvania.—The space of the centre arch is about 200 feet and the other two 150 feet each.

The market of Philadelphia for beef, veal, and mutton, is second only to that of Leadenhall; and its pork, poultry and game, are not inferior to those of the finest climates in the world: though it is excelled by New-York in the articles of fish and fruit.

The City was first incorporated in 1701, before which period it was called the town of Philadelphia; but the Corporation was self elective, and not accountable to the Citizens, according to the exclusive systems of the Mother Country.

On the late auspicious Revolution, this Charter was annulled, and its powers were variously distributed, until in 1789, a Corporation was again regularly organized, by charter, constituting a Mayor, Recorder, fifteen Aldermen, a Common Council, &c. The latter to be annually chosen by the taxable inhabitants.

The public Institutions of Philadelphia, are peculiarly numerous and beneficial.—They include a University, as well as a competent number of public, private and free Schools, a Philosophical Society, a Museum, a public Library, a Hospital, a Dispensary, one public and two private Almshouses, a College of Physicians, Societies for promoting Agriculture, for the encouragement of Arts and Manufactures, for the Abolition of Negro Slavery (a stain of Colonial dependance that still tarnishes the fair escutcheon of American freedom) and for alleviating the miseries of Public prisons, to whose benevolent exertions is chiefly owing the improvement of the penal code, and the present safety of the inhabitant from the depredations of the unprincipled part of the community.

Besides these benevolent Associations, there are now in Philadelphia, four chartered Banks, six marine Insurance Companies, two for insuring against fire, and forty-one Printing offices, seven of which publish daily papers, that are in a few days circulated, from Georgia to New-Hampshire, by means of the Post-office, which originated in 1775, in the then capital of the British Colonies, under the auspices of the venerable Franklin, so long the benefactor of his country.

The Mint of the United States is still kept at Philadelphia; a Type Foundry has been long established, and printing, coachmaking, cabinet work, and shipbuilding, are carried to a degree of perfection unrivalled in America, and little excelled in Europe. But the staple commodity of Philadelphia is flour, of which 400,000 barrels have been exported in a year.

Such is the salubrity of the air of Philadelphia, that the births annually exceed the deaths in the proportion of five to three; yet the excessive heat of the summer months, during which the thermometer may be averaged at 72, and sometimes rises to 93, is so nearly allied to the atmosphere of the burning zone, as readily to receive and propagate the Yellow Fever of the West-Ind-dies, of late so frequently introduced into the United States, through perpetual intercourse, feebly restrained by the inadequate operations of local and temporary health laws.

Within the memory of a gentleman of observation, there were but three coaches kept by all the gentry of Philadelphia; not more than two, or at most three ships arrived once a year with the unrivalled manufactures of Britain; nor were petty sloops fitted out to exchange American flour for West India produce but in shares of one third, one sixth, or even one twelfth, by the then principal Merchants of the place. Without exceeding the bounds of ordinary longevity, he has lived to see twelve or fifteen hundred sail annually expedited for every quarter of the Globe, of which fifteen or twenty double the southern Promontory of Africa, and explore the Antipodes for the most costly productions of the East; while at home three hundred coaches occasionally display the ease of opulence, or the elegance of luxury.

Such an increase of wealth and splendor, within the recollection of a single life, admits of but one comparison in the history of the World; and, if the capital of Russia may justly boast superior numbers, and a more recent origin, Petersburgh has been created among the marshes of the Neva by a succession of absolute princes, commanding the resources of a mighty empire; while Philadelphia, at first only the chief town of a dependent colony, and now no more than the capital of a single province of an infant Nation, has risen upon the banks of the Delaware, from the liberal institutes of a PRIVATE Founder, seconded only by the energy of principle, and the efforts of intelligence, to a distinguished rank among the capitals of Nations.

REMARKS.

1. No ship or vessel, from foreign ports, or coming by sea from any port of the United States, shall be permitted to report, make entry or break bulk, till the master shall deliver to the postmaster all letters under his care, or within his power, other than such as are to be delivered at the port of entry, or such as are directed to the owner or consignee of such ship or vessel; and on oath or affirmation, to be taken of such delivery, the master to receive two cents for every letter so delivered.

2. Goods from foreign ports cannot be unladen but between sun-rise and sun-set, without special licence, under a penalty of four hundred dollars on the master, and every other person concerned, disability from holding any office under the government of the United States for seven years, and being advertised in the newspapers, with forfeiture of the goods; which, if amounting to 400 dollars, will subject the vessel, and apparel also, to forfeiture.

3. Goods removed before gauged and weighed, and if wines, spirits or teas, before being marked, without permission, are forfeited.

4. Persons giving or offering a bribe, forfeit from two hundred to two thousand dollars.—Inspectors and officers of the revenue cutters, may go on board, examine and search vessels, have access to the cabin, and seal packages; and after sun-set, secure hatches, &c.—Persons in charge of vessels, for breaking fastenings, but in the presence of an officer, forfeit five hundred dollars.

PENNSVLVANIA HOSPITAL,

●N WHICH IS ENGRAFTED BY AN ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE.

THE LYING IN & FOUNDLING HOSPITAL:

The patients to be admitted into this Hospital, are the sick in body or mind, except with contagious diseases; these are admitted from the Hospital Dispensary as out patients.

Forty paupers are allowed to be received at one time, and no more, the funds at present not being sufficient to provide for a larger number; but the charity will be extended to the poor, in proportion to the increase of the capital stock, which can only arise from future legacies or contributions, no tax being assessed on the citizens for the support of this institution.

In the mean time the affluent are received, as pay patients, at 3 to eight dollars a week, according to their circumstances in life, and the profit made by their board is applied with the interest of the capital, to the support of poor patients.

Accidents however, such as fractures, bad bruises, are admitted GRATIS, if brought within 24 hours after they happen, and the doors are to be opened at all hours to receive them.

In all other cases, applications should be made to one of the attending physicians and managers, whose names are published monthly in Poulson's papers. But on the 4th and 7th day of every week, those managers and physicians attend regularly at the hospital from 10 to 12 o'clock in the afternoon, on purpose to receive and discharge patients, where if the applicant applies, it will often save much trouble.

Legacies are usually given in the corporate name, viz. "I give to the Contributors to the Pennsylvania Hospital, and to their successors, &c." Contributions and donations are sent or taken to

JOSEPH SAUNDERS LEWIS,

Treasurer, 25 Dock, between Front and Second streets.

PEAL'S MUSEUM.

Is the only permanent place of rational amusement in the city—It is a private establishment, begun by the present proprietor in the year 1785, and notwithstanding the difficulties, which were to overcome, it now ranks with the capital Museums of Europe; in point of arrangement surpassing most, and in the number, variety and preservation of the subjects surpassed by few. In acknowledgement of its public utility, the Legislature of Pennsylvania, have granted for its use, the upper part of the State House; where the principal part is now displayed in an elegant and instructive manner: the other part of Peale's Museum occupying three rooms in the Philosophical Hall, independently of the Society's private cabinet. To the Museum in the State House, which is open every day from sun rise till dark, the admission for each person is 25 cents, including a printed guide descriptive of the rooms, which is presented to each company. One of Hawkin's Patent Physiognotrases is in one of the rooms, and the attendant, who is an experienced operator, receive from such as chuse to employ him 8 cents for drawing and cutting out each set of Profiles, containing 4, which may be handsomely framed in a few minutes at the bar. To the other branch of the Museum the admission is 50 cents....here are seen the MAMMOTH, Antique Statutes and Gems, Wax Work representing Indians of various nations and numerous articles of Indian manufacture, implements of war and agriculture, dress, &c.
